Online Graduate Course for Teachers of Grades 4-12

March 14 – May 2, 2005

Improving Reading and Writing in the Content Areas (1.3 graduate credits)

Audience

English language arts, social studies, science, mathematics, special education, Title 1, and ESL teachers in grades 4-12, as well as staff developers

Course Description

Improving Reading and Writing in the Content Areas (Six sessions: March 14 – May 2, 2005). This workshop will give teachers the tools they need to integrate literacy strategies into content learning to help raise student achievement. By the end of the workshop, participants will be able to locate web-based tools, strategies, and lessons that foster literacy skills in all content areas. They will also have developed a preliminary lesson plan incorporating these tools and strategies.

Faculty

Joan Dunfey has taught in the fields of literacy and technology integration for the past 25 years. She has worked with numerous school systems and currently researches and designs software and teacher curricula for various EDC projects. She has facilitated online courses for EDC, as well as for the Lesley University Graduate School of Education.
